(NEW YORK, NY) – Youth, parents, youth justice advocates, elected officials, and public defender organizations will gather in front of the Horizon Juvenile Center detention facility on Tuesday, October 21, 2025, at 2:00 PM for a rally followed by a march to St. Mary's Park in the Bronx for a speak out in celebration of Youth Justice Action Month. Background:

The #Right2RemainSilent: Children's Early Access to Counsel legislation, sponsored by New York State Senator Jamaal Bailey and Assembly Member Andrew Hevesi, would ensure that all young New Yorkers consult with a lawyer before they can waive their right to remain silent and be interrogated by police.

Specifically, this legislation modifies the Family Court Act and Criminal Procedure Law to ensure that a child under age 18 may be interrogated by law enforcement only after the young person has consulted with counsel, thereby ensuring any waiver of Miranda rights is genuinely knowing, voluntary, and intelligent. It also requires the police to notify a parent before transporting the child to the precinct when taking a child into custody.

Adolescent brain science has established what everyone knows – that young people lack the capacity to fully understand Miranda warnings and appreciate the long-term consequences of their decisions.

The Exonerated Five were interrogated as youth and coerced into false confessions in New York City more than 30 years ago. That same year in Westchester County, Jeffrey Deskovic was also interrogated without counsel at age 16, resulting in a coerced false confession and wrongful conviction, despite exculpatory DNA evidence. In the decades since then, New York State has failed to curb deceptive interrogation tactics used by the police.

This bill would ensure that all children under 18, including the predominantly Black and Latine youth who are too often the targets of police interrogation, have the benefit of an attorney protecting their right to remain silent.

Every year, tens of thousands of young people ages 18-25 are arrested in New York, nearly all of them Black and Latine. There are over 1,000 young people 25 and under at Rikers Island today. Starting on their 18th birthday, young people are charged as adults and face adult sentencing and criminal records, even though a growing consensus in the field of adolescent brain development shows us that young people are still developing and maturing well into their 20's.

The barriers created by adult convictions and sentencing make it harder for young people to finish school, get good jobs, and find stable housing. The Youth Justice and Opportunities Act (YJ&O), sponsored by New York State Senator Zellnor Myrie and Assembly Member Latrice M. Walker, would expand alternatives to incarceration and immediate record sealing for young people age 25 and younger, creating opportunities for release and successful reentry.

YJ&O would build on New York's decades-old youthful offender (YO) law, which provides an opportunity for youth under 19 to receive age-appropriate sentences, including diversion and alternatives to incarceration, and have their cases sealed so that they can pursue education, employment, housing, and other opportunities. YJ&O would create a new "Young Adult" status to protect New Yorkers ages 19-25, consistent with the scientific consensus that a young person's decision-making capabilities continue to develop into their mid-20s.

It would also:

- create opportunities for judges to sentence young people to treatment or other programs instead of incarceration;
- expand judicial discretion to grant YO, including the option to grant YO more than once;
- expand the categories of cases where YO status is mandatory rather than discretionary;
- allow judges to waive fees and surcharges for all young people ages 18 - 25;
- allow young people with a criminal record to petition the court to be retroactively “re-sentenced.”

The Youth Justice Innovation Fund, sponsored by Senator Cordell Cleare and Assembly Member Andrew Hevesi would direct $50 million to community-based organizations to provide a continuum of services from prevention, early intervention, to alternatives to detention, placement and incarceration for youth aged 12 through 25. The Innovation Fund builds on successful state-wide efforts like Project RISE, which has brought over $30 million to communities to combat gun violence through public health strategies, including credible messenger and violence interruption programs.

The Innovation Fund would be administered by New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services, making $50 million available to community-based organizations most trusted and best-equipped to serve adolescents and young adults through a grant-making program to support young people who are at-risk for or who come into contact with law enforcement.
